

'Galia'

A popular commercial variety that can be grown outdoors, this vigorous plant bears good, successive yields of fruits, which mature early in the season. The greeny-yellow skin has a "netted" appearance, and the pale green flesh is succulent and sweet.

unsuitable for containers

late spring

good resistance

not hardy

self-fertile

midsummer

'Halona'

Hybrid 'Halona' was bred for flavor and resistance to powdery mildews and fusarium wilts. When picked ripe, at 79 days, the ribbed, netted fruits weigh 4–5 lb (1.8–2.3 kg), boast small seed cavities and have sweet, orange flesh.

unsuitable for containers

mid-spring

good resistance

not hardy

self-fertile

late summer

'Eden's Gem'

These softball-sized, netted heirloom muskmelons have a firm texture and luscious, complex flavor. Also known as 'Rocky Ford Green Flesh', the 1–2-lb (0.5–1-kg) fruits ripen early, in 70–80 days. Vines are rust-resistant.

unsuitable for containers

mid-spring

some resistance

not hardy

self-fertile

mid- to late summer