

'Cox's Orange Pippin'

Championed by many as the finest English eating apple, the orangey-yellow skin is tinged with red and covers a crisp, juicy, and superbly flavored flesh. The blossom is sensitive to frost, however, and the trees have poor resistance to diseases.

-  on a dwarfing rootstock
-  early spring or fall
-  some resistance
-  hardy
-  self-fertile (mid)
-  mid-fall

'Golden Delicious'

This trouble-free variety is best grown in a warm, sheltered site for the most flavorsome crop. The large, yellow-green apples have a light, crisp flesh and sweet flavor; they are best eaten fresh. They store for up to eight months.

-  on a dwarfing rootstock
-  early spring or fall
-  excellent resistance
-  hardy
-  needs 1 pollenizer (mid)
-  mid-fall