

'Sturon'

This older variety is reliable and high yielding, and has a good flavor. The bulbs are medium in size and globe-shaped, with slightly high shoulders and good, even-toned, yellow-brown skins. It is slow to bolt in the ground and also keeps very well when in storage.

suitable for containers

late winter to mid-spring

some resistance

fairly hardy

late summer to mid-fall

'Stuttgarter'

This strong-flavored, and long-day onion forms large, yellow-skinned bulbs that are excellent for cooking and store very well. This variety is commonly sold as sets, which should be planted as soon as the ground can be worked.

suitable for containers

early to mid-spring

poor resistance

hardy biennial

late summer

'Borettana'

This Italian heirloom variety is traditionally planted at close spacing to produce small bulbs for pickling or cooking whole. It has pale, yellow-brown skin and crisp, white, sweet flesh. Grown at normal spacing, it produces medium-sized, flattened bulbs.

suitable for containers

late winter to mid-spring

poor resistance

fairly hardy

late summer to mid-fall