-  early fall to early winter

'King Richard'

This well-established, early favorite is a good choice for a quick crop of baby leeks, but will also go on to produce mature plants with very long shafts and pale-green leaves. It is popular for showing and slow to bolt, with a sweet, tender flavor.

-  suitable for containers
-  early to mid-spring
-  some resistance
-  hardy
-  early fall to early winter

'Lancelot'

This early variety is a good choice for producing an early crop of baby leeks and it can also be left until early winter to produce a full-sized crop. It is an easy-going variety and is also well-suited to being grown in containers.
