

'Gijnlim'

This long-established, all-male hybrid has proved reliable and will crop well over many years. The mid-green stems are thick, succulent, and numerous, and have pronounced purple tips. Production peaks early in the season, with high yields overall.

-  unsuitable for containers
-  early spring
-  some resistance
-  hardy
-  mid-spring to early summer

'Lucullus'

This all-male hybrid has proved reliable over many years in a wide range of gardens. It bears high yields of good-quality spears, with yields peaking later in the season. Arguably, however, it is not in the same class as more modern asparagus cultivars.

-  unsuitable for containers
-  early spring
-  some resistance
-  hardy
-  mid-spring to midsummer

'Purple Passion'

This non-hybrid variety has purple stems of good flavor. Color is lost during cooking, but can be retained by careful steaming or microwaving. The tender stems lack string, and are especially suited to eating raw—they can be especially sweet.

-  unsuitable for containers
-  early spring
-  some resistance
-  hardy
-  mid-spring to midsummer