

ceased to operate in 1927 when the NWR built a broad-gauge line from Sirhind to Rupar.

One of the objectives for the construction of this monorail system was to employ the large number of animals, such as bullocks and mules, maintained by the State. Bullocks can be seen hauling a train on the route in this picture.