

THE MUMBAI “LOCAL”

The bustling city of Mumbai is synonymous with its suburban railway network. Over the years, a unique culture has evolved in these trains. From chopping vegetables and knitting to playing cards and singing bhajans (devotional songs), people have found a new way of life while commuting within the city. The amusing stories from these trains, fondly called “locals”, have been recreated in many films and books. Even the world-renowned dabbawala (tiffin porter) service relies heavily on local trains to get food to their customers on time.

Dabbawalas use the “locals” for tiffin delivery.
