

▲ A newspaper article from The Statesman reporting on the Kakori Conspiracy, detailing the robbery at Kakori, a station on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

The 8 Down from Shahjahanpur was nearing the small town of Kakori, 16 km from Lucknow (in modern-day Uttar Pradesh). Besides passengers, the train was also carrying the railways' day's earnings from every station in the region to the railway headquarters in Lucknow. On board too were 10 men – revolutionaries who were members of the newly created Hindustan Republican Association (HRA). Armed with Mauser pistols, they waited for a prearranged signal. It was 9 August 1925 and the men were embarking on an armed robbery that would go down in the history of India's Independence movement as a daring attack against all odds.