

when blocks of ice were placed underneath the car floor to run its cooling system.

In a daring escape in 1941, the legendary freedom fighter Subhas Chandra Bose slipped away from house arrest and journeyed from Gomoh (Jharkhand) to Delhi by the Kalka Mail and then from Delhi to Peshawar in the Frontier Mail. Today, the train is known as the Golden Temple Mail and runs from Mumbai to Amritsar, undertaking the journey in 32 hours across 33 halts.

▲ This print from 1935 depicts the Frontier Mail crossing a viaduct as it travels through Dara Pass in the Aravalli Hills in Rajasthan on its way from Bombay to Delhi. The engine pulling the train is recorded to be a 158-tonne XC 4-6-2 steam locomotive made in the Vulcan Foundry in Lancashire, UK in 1928–29.