

ANGLO-INDIANS AND THE RAILWAYS

Between the 18th and late 19th centuries, the term “Anglo-Indian” referred to British citizens who lived and worked in India. It began representing persons of mixed ethnicity with the 1911 census. Anglo-Indians, as anthropologist Laura Bear puts it, are a railway caste.

▲ A European railway Institute at Jamalpur, Bihar