

The Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway's October 1942 timetable listed one broad-gauge and two meter-gauge refreshment car services, and also provided extensive details of the locations, menus, and tariffs of refreshment rooms, showing separate facilities for European, Hindu, and Muslim dining options. Its helpful advice to the traveller included, "to state whether 'boiled' or 'fried' eggs are required", and noted that "butlers will reserve seats at the Refreshment Room tables for the number of meals ordered by resting the chairs against the table." Telegraphic codes used to order meals were also given. For instance, a substantial, healthy breakfast of fish, bacon, and eggs was coded FBT (meal with tea) or FBC (meal with coffee).