

▲ Based on the 1954 novel Bhowani Junction written by a British army officer, John Masters, this eponymous film was released in 1956. It stars Ava Gardner as Victoria Jones, the daughter of a British railway man living in the imaginary town of Bhowani. Shot in both England and Pakistan, the film gives a peek into the lives of the British and Anglo-Indians of the railway community and the challenges they faced before India's Independence.
