

▲ Railway employees work relentlessly to improvise and upgrade equipment and ensure smooth running and safety. Here, rail workers in Amritsar, Punjab, convert the traditional lever frame to a new electronic interlocking system.

Right on track

Intertwining tracks on the Indian landscape make for a powerful picture. They are visible symbols of the material presence of railways connecting even remote areas. The tremendous work that goes into constructing and maintaining them, however, often remains unreported and undocumented.

Key on-ground staff, the track maintainers and keymen, focus on walking along the lines assigned to them, inspecting sleepers, fittings,