

BOGIBEEL BRIDGE

The 4.9-km-long Bogibeel bridge over the Brahmaputra River, connecting the Assamese cities of Dibrugarh and Silapathar, about 6 km from Arunachal Pradesh, opened for use in December 2018. It has a two-line track on the lower deck and a three-lane road on the top deck. Work began in 2002 about six years after its foundation stone was first laid in 1997, but progress slowed substantially, mostly because of the weather. The bridge has reduced the travel time from Assam to Arunachal Pradesh to four hours. It is considered extremely important for improved access to the north-east region and for its proximity to the India–China border.

▲ The Bogibeel bridge is Asia's second longest rail- and road-bridge.