

HOSPITAL ON WHEELS

The Lifeline Express, also called the Jeevan Rekha Express, is a hospital train providing medical care to people living in remote rural areas. Launched in 1991 in collaboration with a Mumbai-based non-governmental organization (NGO) Impact India Foundation, the train travels across the country to states, such as Rajasthan in the north-west, Maharashtra in the west, and Tripura and Assam in the north-east. The train is styled like a hospital, with operation theatres, pharmacies, patient wards, as well as dental and mammography units. Over the years, it has provided medical support to millions of people.
