

Film posters

United States

The Gold Rush (USA, 1925), a classic silent film, is touching yet very funny.

Raging Bull (USA, 1980) is one of the most influential films of the 1980s.

Blade Runner (USA, 1982) portrays a bleak Los Angeles in 2019.

Do the Right Thing (USA, 1989) develops from comedy to social comment.

Europe

The Battleship Potemkin (USSR, 1925), commissioned by Soviet leaders to put across a powerful political message, is still referred to as a masterpiece of cinema.

Metropolis (Ger. 1926) is a disturbing vision of an "ideal" city in the year 2000.

Pelle the Conqueror (Den/Swe. 1987) won top international awards.

Four Weddings and a Funeral (UK, 1994) is a light-hearted, appealing romance.

Women... (Spain, 1988) is a manic farce from talented director Pedro Almodóvar.

Once Were Warriors (NZ, 1994): a great success critically and at the box-office.

The Piano (Aust. 1993), directed and written by Jane Campion, won three Oscars.

Africa

Yeelen (Mali, 1987) tells the story of the struggle between a father and son.

In Yaaba (Burkina, 1989), a friendship develops between a boy and an old woman cast out by other villagers.

The Sixth Day (Egypt, 1986), directed by Youssef Chahine, starred actress Daleeda.

Asia

Ran (Japan, 1985) is based on King Lear by Shakespeare; the battle scenes are superbly staged and shot.

Pathar Panchali (India, 1956) brought its director, Satyajit Ray, world recognition.

Raise the Red Lantern (HK, 1991) looks at a woman's life in 1920s' China.