

Grasses

Timothy grass is a nutritious pasture grass.

Soft brome grass is common on verges and wasteground.

Smooth meadow grass has graceful flowerheads.

Couch grass is a weed in gardens and farmland.

Sweet vernal grass is a pleasant-smelling grass.

Crested dogtail is a widespread grass.

Cocksfoot grass has short, stiff flower spikes.

Flowerheads resemble cocks' feet.

Branched flowerhead

Spreading flowerhead

Delicate feathery awns

Closely packed flowerheads

Needle grass has rigid stems and narrow, in-rolled leaves.

Bermuda grass is common in warm parts of the world.

Large quaking grass has thin-stemmed flowerheads that tremble in the breeze.

Great brome grass has been introduced to many countries from the Mediterranean.

Tufted hair grass grows into large tussocks 2 m (6.5 ft) tall.

Rushes and sedges

Soft rush is a very common rush of bogs and marshes.

Woodrush has fine hairs on the margins of its leaves.

Common sedge spreads on creeping underground stems.

Greater tussock sedge has stiff leaves with finely toothed edges.

Clusters of flowers borne up the stem

False fox sedge has sharp-angled triangular stems.

Pendulous sedge has long drooping flower spikes.

Greater pond sedge grows beside rivers and ponds.

Hairy sedge has hairy leaves and fruits.