

Airships and balloons

Balloons

A

Lavishly decorated character from the Thousand and One Nights

Easter egg envelope is decorated to celebrate Easter.

Golf ball, an uncomplicated, yet realistic balloon shape

Upside-down balloon, where a false basket has been attached to the balloon's top.

Fabergé egg, the trademark jewel of a famous Russian jewellers

Basket

Part of this balloon hangs below the basket.

Modern tractor has its basket hanging where the back axle would be.

Carmen Miranda, a 1940s' singing star

A "cow jumps over the moon" is a very complicated balloon shape inspired by the famous nursery rhyme.

Uncle Sam, a lighthearted symbol of the USA

Face-shaped balloons are relatively simple to create.

Upturned eaves

Japanese temple; the envelope comes complete with authentic upturned eaves and balcony rails.

Spectacular eagle has a very complicated and realistically painted envelope.

Drink can, the first non-traditional balloon shape

Santa Claus, an aerial Christmas decoration

NASA rocket, celebrating space exploration.

Elephant, complete with trunk and a surprised look!

Rupert the Bear, a favourite fictional character for children all over the world

Airships

Aerial tours are often run by companies that have both airships and balloons.

Modern airships, because of their visibility and size, are often used to advertise products or services.