

number of protons in an element's nucleus) and grouped within the chart according to the arrangement of the outer electrons. This way a chemist can predict the likely characteristics of an element from its position on the table.

