

1

ORIGINS

4.5 MYA–3000 BCE

Evidence of the earliest hominins, the ancestors of modern humans, has been found in Central and East Africa, and dates back millions of years. Discoveries of early human remains reveal the remarkable ability to adapt to Earth's changing environment that has been so significant in the evolution of our species.