

6

INDUSTRY AND REVOLUTION

1750–1914

From the middle of the 18th century, the world experienced radical change. Political revolutions challenged established governments, aiming to throw off the shackles of oppression and privilege. New methods of mechanization and transportation resulted in an age of industry and manufacturing that gave birth to new cities and consolidated empires.