

FRONT VIEW

The Model 10-E Electra, shown here, has its cowlings removed to reveal the Pratt & Whitney Wasp Junior engines. Both their power, each delivering 450hp, and their reliability, made the Electra able to dispense with the third engine found in many earlier airliners.

Fuel gauge

Compass

Artificial horizon

Altimeter

Fuel pump switch

Control column wheel

Wheels have hydraulic disk brakes

Specifications (10-A)ENGINE 2 x 450hp Pratt & Whitney Wasp Junior radialsWINGSPAN 55ft (16.8m)LENGTH 38ft 7in (11.7m)WEIGHT 9,750lb (4,423kg)TOP SPEED 202mph (325kph)PASSENGERS 10CREW 2NIGHT FLIER

The Lockheed Model 10 Electra was fully equipped for night-flying, with an impressive range of flight instruments including a gyrocompass and an artificial horizon. The pilot and copilot sat side by side, an arrangement facilitating communication.

