

Lungs

Your lungs fill most of the space inside your rib cage. They take in oxygen from the air and send out waste carbon dioxide.

No lungs

Not every animal has lungs. There are other ways animals breathe.

Frogs can absorb oxygen through their skin—even underwater.

Insects such as caterpillars breathe through body openings called spiracles.

Many sea creatures, such as sharks, breathe through gills.

