

Using gas

When air in a balloon is heated, it becomes lighter than the surrounding air and quickly fills the balloon. The lighter air rises, taking the balloon and passengers with it.

No matter

A place with no matter, not even air, is called a vacuum. The closest thing to a vacuum is the space between stars.

Astronauts wear special suits in space because it is very cold and there is no air to breathe.

Turn and learn

Amazing atoms:

pp. 58-59

The universe:

pp. 94-95

