

▽ Boeing 727-200 1967

Origin USA

Engine 3 x 14,500 lb (6,577 kg) thrust Pratt & Whitney JT8-D turbofan

Top speed 541 mph (871 km/h)

The 727 is notable for being the only Boeing trijet, as well as the only one to have a T-tail. This was a very popular machine on the US's domestic routes, it also operated on short- and medium-range international flights.

△ BAe Jetstream TMk2 1967

Origin UK

Engine 2 x 940 hp Garrett TPE331 turboprop

Top speed 303 mph (488 km/h)

Although originally designed by Handley Page as a small commuter airliner, the Royal Navy operated several Jetstream 31s as the Tmk2 navigation trainer.

◁ Antonov An-26 1967

Origin USSR

Engine 2 x 2,820 hp Progress AI-24VT turboprop

Top speed 335 mph (540 km/h)

Known by NATO as the "Curl," the An-26 was operated by both the military and civil airlines. Because it was a product of the Cold War, emphasis was given to its use for tactical transport.

▷ Fairchild C-123K Provider 1967

Origin USA

Engine 2 x 2,500 hp Pratt & Whitney Double Wasp air-cooled 18-cylinder 2-row radial, plus 2 x 2,850 lb (1,293 kg) thrust General Electric J85 turbojet

Top speed 288 mph (463 km/h)

Based on a design for a WWII assault glider, the C-123 was a rugged machine. The type was also used to spray Agent Orange over Vietnam, during the infamous Operation Ranch Hand.

◁ Tupolev Tu-154 1969

Origin USSR

Engine 3 x 23,148 lb (10,500 kg) thrust Soloviev D-30KU turbofan

Top speed 590 mph (950 km/h)

Although the Tu-154 was one of the fastest civil airliners, it also had the ability to operate from unpaved runways. Aeroflot retired its fleet of Tu-154s in 2009, after 40 years of service.

▷ Tupolev Tu-134A 1969

Origin USSR

Engine 2 x 14,990 lb (6,799 kg) thrust Soloviev turbofan

Top speed 558 mph (898 km/h)

One of the mainstays of Aeroflot's jet fleet, the Tu-134 was similar in appearance to the Caravelle and DC-9, although early models had a fully glazed nose. In common with many other Soviet designs (and unlike most western jetliners), the Tu-134 could operate from unpaved runways.
