

1900 TO PRESENT

The early 20th century was dominated by two world wars, which weakened many European nations. They lost control of their overseas territories in Africa, Asia, and other parts of the world as people fought for and gained independence. The late 20th century saw new conflicts rise, but also new ideas about freedom and equality. The invention of computers led to space exploration and an information age that continues into the 21st century.