

500–1450

Civilizations throughout the world flourished during this period. Empires in China, India, and parts of Africa underwent golden ages of culture, and the Aztec and Inca civilizations in the Americas reached their peak. Christianity spread from the Middle East, eventually dominating Europe, but then a new religion arose—Islam. This quickly spread from the Middle East, bringing a new faith and culture to many parts of Asia and Africa.

