

1450-1750

From the 15th century, Europeans were inspired by a newfound curiosity that led to major scientific discoveries and developments in art. Europeans embarked on voyages of exploration, and eventually built overseas empires to rival older civilizations that continued to flourish in the Middle East, China, and India. These new empires were built on the exploitation of Indigenous people that lived in these regions, as well as millions of enslaved Africans.