

NINE WORLDS

The Norse cosmos is made up of nine realms populated by gods, giants, elves, dwarfs, mortals, and any number of monsters, creatures and spirits. Some worlds are beautiful, bright and full of life, others are dark, barren, and the home of dead souls.

ASGARD

This is home to the Aesir gods and goddesses – a fortified place connected to Midgard by a magical bridge called Bifrost.

MIDGARD

This is the realm where men and women live. It is found further out from Asgard on the World Tree.

VANAHEIM

This land is where the Vanir – the gods and goddesses of nature – came from.

JOTUNHEIM

The land of the giants is a place where the gods go to fight, have adventures and make mischief.

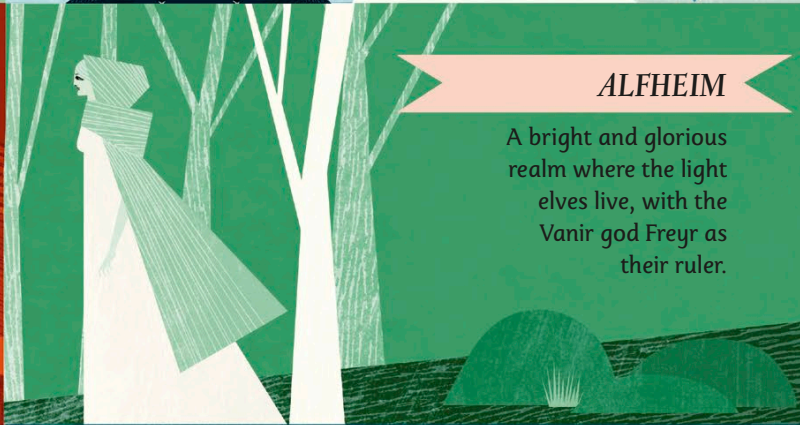

NIFLHEIM

Criminals, oath-breakers and those who die dishonourably go to this chilly land of the dead.

MUSPELHEIM

This smouldering land, smoke-choked and hot, is home to the destructive Fire Giants and their swarthy leader, Surtr.

ALFHEIM

A bright and glorious realm where the light elves live, with the Vanir god Freyr as their ruler.

NIDAVELLIR

This vast, deep mine is home to the dwarfs. The air glows fiery orange and echoes with the sound of industry.

SVARTALFHEIM

A shadowy, underground place. Some dwarfs live here, as well as the mysterious and dangerous dark elves.
