

ELVES

There are two types of elf. Bright, “good” elves are almost godlike creatures that deal in magic and are close to nature and the Vanir. The dark, “evil” elves also have magical powers, and live in an underground land.

Because they live underground, dark elves are sometimes confused with dwarfs, but they are very different.

Bright elves are very beautiful and said to be brighter than the Sun.

DWARFS, TROLLS AND ELVES

All over the Norse cosmos are strange and magical beings, connected by ever-shifting alliances, loyalties and rivalries. Although the gods and giants hold the most power, these other creatures can influence events and can even outdo the gods in certain ways.

TROLLS

Trolls are closely related to the giants. They are usually large and can be frighteningly ugly, although some are more human-like in appearance. Unhelpful and even hostile to other beings, trolls are best avoided. Sunlight turns them into stone landmarks.

Trolls usually lurk in harsh, lonely places such as mountains or rocky caves.