

FÓLKVANGR

Fólkvangr ("field of armies") is Freya's home, where half of those warriors who die bravely are sent. Not much is known about it, but it's said to be "great and fair".

A huge goat called Heidrun eats from a tree and produces an endless supply of delicious mead from her udders. This is drunk by the Einherjar.

Valkyries are powerful female spirits who fly over battlefields and choose which of the slain to carry to Valhalla. They give horns of mead to the chosen warriors when they arrive.

NORSE FUNERALS

Important Norse were buried under mounds of earth, along with their belongings, including weapons, armour, treasure, animals such as horses and dogs, and sometimes a whole ship. It's not known how often, or if ever, the Norse cremated (burned) their dead in ships, as in Baldr's story.

REBIRTH

Some accounts say that the dead can be reborn into the body of one of their descendants.
