

An illustration on the left side of the page depicts a dramatic scene. At the top, there are stylized, layered clouds in shades of grey and white. Below them, a dark blue vertical band represents a heavy rain or storm, with white lines indicating falling rain. The background of the entire page is a light cream color.

Vili and Ve – and especially Odin – had a very high opinion of themselves. They wanted to bring forth an ordered world out of the existing chaos. However, they knew someone would have to pay a high price for their plan to succeed. And that someone was the giant Ymir. The three brothers found the Frost Giant, and although he towered over them and fought furiously, they killed him with sword and hammer. The earth trembled when Ymir fell and Odin roared in victory.

So much blood gushed from Ymir's wounds that it swept all over the land and rose up to create a rolling red sea.

The entire race of giants was drowned in the flood – except for one called Bergelmir, who with his wife, managed to stay afloat in a hollow tree trunk until the blood-sea receded.

Odin and his two brothers killed the Frost Giant, Ymir...