

Angry at Mundilfari's arrogance, Odin ordered Sol to drive the Sun's chariot across the sky, and Mani to control the Moon.

Mani found his work tiring, so he lifted two children up to the heavens to help. They'd been returning from a well with a pail of water on a pole. Some say they can still be seen on the surface of the Moon even today.

The Sun and Moon move swiftly and never stop to rest. This is because they're pursued by two hungry wolves: Sköll chases the Sun, Hati the Moon. One day, come the end of the world at Ragnarök, the wolves will catch up and swallow Odin's lights forever.
