

Frigg turned on Loki. “This was your plan, and your silver tongue that convinced us,” she said, her voice like ice. “So it’s your job to sort this disaster out. And if you don’t, I’ll drain the life from you – slowly and painfully.”

Loki held up his hands and smiled a sickly smile.

“Leave it to me, my friends. I know what to do.”

That night, as the stranger and Svadilfari were dragging the final load of stones needed to finish the wall, a beautiful mare with a silky mane pranced out from between the trees. It was Loki in disguise! But Svadilfari was bewitched by the mare’s beauty and followed her back into the forest, never to be seen again.

The stranger worked hard to complete the wall in one season.