

Why Odin is One-Eyed

Odin the All-Father sought one thing above all else: wisdom.

The god would make terrible sacrifices to obtain it, because he knew that wisdom gave him his best chance to postpone Ragnarök, the grim destiny to which his people were doomed.

Odin knew he could gain instant knowledge and insight by drinking from Mimir's Well, whose waters bubbled up from under Yggdrasil's roots. But he faced a problem: the well was in the land of the giants – Jotunheim. And as it was Odin who killed Ymir and drowned the giants in blood, he would certainly not be welcome there.

So Odin disguised himself and ventured forth to Jotunheim.

Upon reaching the well's crystal-clear waters, Odin found them guarded by a shadowy figure – Mimir!
