

JÖRMUNGANDR

THE WORLD SERPENT

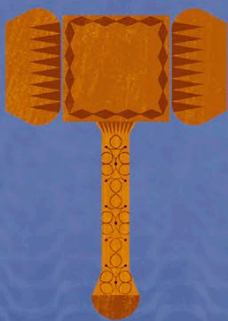

The sea-serpent Jörmungandr is an extraordinary creature. It completely encircles the ocean surrounding Midgard. The serpent lurks just beneath the waves – scales shining in the sunlight, with its tail clasped in its mouth. Ragnarök will begin when Jörmungandr releases its tail.

FAMILY TIES

Jörmungandr's father is the trickster god Loki, and his mother is the giantess Angrboda. The serpent has a sister, Hel, the mournful ruler of the underworld, and a brother too – Fenrir the wolf.

Fearing that this child of Loki would grow up to cause trouble, Odin threw Jörmungandr into the ocean. But the serpent survived, and its size – and hatred for the Aesir – grew to epic proportions.

ENEMIES

Jörmungandr loathes the Aesir because they killed the Frost Giants, but he hates Thor most of all. Thor once almost caught the serpent while out on a fishing trip, and they will meet again at Ragnarök.

END OF THE COSMOS

At Ragnarök, Jörmungandr will crawl onto the land and spray poison into the sea and the air. The serpent will fight Thor to the death.
