

Single The flowers have a daisy-like appearance, with a central disk surrounded by oval petals. They are attractive to bees.

Ball The fully double spherical flowers, sometimes flattened on top, are formed of small, densely packed tubular petals.

Pompom These are miniature forms of ball dahlia, but are more spherical, with fully double tubular petals.

Cactus The fully double blooms are formed of narrow pointed petals that can be straight or curved inward, giving a shaggy effect.