

Treetops

All monkeys are excellent climbers – some have long tails that they use as another limb. The spider monkey's tail is bald at the end for extra grip.

Spider monkeys have no thumbs.

Woolly spider monkey

Mandrill

Ground monkey

The mandrill is one of the few monkeys that climbs trees only to sleep at night. During the day, it walks around on all fours. When a male feels threatened, it yawns widely revealing its fearsome teeth.

Monkeys have hands like ours that can grasp branches.

Bushbaby

Bushbaby

The bushbaby is a small primate that sleeps during the day and ventures out to hunt at night. It has huge eyes that help it to see in the dark.
