

The apes

Many people confuse monkeys and apes. Apes are large, intelligent creatures that have no visible tails and can stand more upright than monkeys. You and I are members of the ape family.

Family life

Gorillas live in groups of up to 40 animals, which consist of one male and many females and babies. The males are twice the size of the females and as they mature, they grow a strip of silvery fur across their backs.

The mighty gorilla

Gorillas are the largest and most powerful of the apes, but they are rarely aggressive. They live in forests in central Africa.
