

The world of microlife

Some creepy-crawlies, whether insects or other tiny creatures, are so small that you can't see them unless you look through a microscope. They are everywhere, however – even in your eyelashes!

Some plankton are as big as your fingernail, others are too small to see.

Unwelcome guests

Tiny animals like to share our body with us. Some are helpful guests but others we would rather get rid of, like this head louse.

Head louse

Eyelash mite

Head lice make your scalp itch.

Eyelash mites

Like everyone else in the world, you have had tiny mites living on your eyelashes since you were a baby. They are harmless but can make your eyes itch a little.

Some of these tiny bacteria give you a very sick tummy.

Turn and learn

Pests and plagues:
pp. 116-117