

Bears

Members of the bear family are big, furry mammals with large heads, thick legs, and short tails. They have five claws on each foot.

Bear necessities

Bears have a good sense of smell, but weak eyesight and hearing. This is reflected in their large nose and very small ears and eyes.

Brown bear

Bears of the world

There are only eight types of bear in the world, including the polar bear and the brown bear.

Brown bear: this big bear lives in Europe, Asia, and North America.

Polar bear: the biggest and most deadly bear. It lives in the Arctic.

Spectacled bear: it got this name because it looks as if it is wearing glasses.

A long doze

Many bears are dormant in the winter, which means they doze or sleep non-stop during this time. They eat and eat during the summer and autumn months, building up fat they can use in the winter.

The brown bear can stand up to 3.5 m (11 ft) – that's twice the height of an adult human!
