

Small and cunning

There are many small, meat-eating mammals that hunt or scavenge for their food. Many are known for their clever hunting methods.

The weasel family

Members of the weasel family have long bodies and short legs. They have a fierce reputation for hunting – they are able to kill animals larger than themselves.

The American mink has a dark brown coat all year round.

Stoat

Stoats

Stoats and minks are small animals related to weasels. In summer, stoats are brown with a white tummy, and in winter, some turn white so that they are camouflaged in the snow.

Weasels hunt by themselves, killing animals by biting their necks.

Weasel

Turn and learn

The badger, a relative of the weasel:
p. 25