

Hoofed giants

The last members of the hoofed family are by no means the least. They are some of the biggest mammals in the world. Meet the hoofed giants.

Healthy appetite

Giraffes are never short of food – they have such long necks that they can reach high leaves on trees.

Family members

Some cousins of the hoofed giants are much smaller in size.

Okapi: this animal is the only relative of the giraffe. It has a much shorter neck.

Pygmy hippo: this small hippo is a fifth the size of its cousin.

Alpaca: alpacas and llamas are camel cousins that live in South America.

Giraffes

The giraffe is the world's tallest animal. It is taller than three tall men standing on each other's heads!
