

Swan family

A female swan lays up to eight eggs in a clutch and only she looks after them. When the chicks are born, both parents take care of them for about five months.

These swan chicks catch a ride on their mother's back.

Feeding frenzy

Both parents help to feed their chicks. Some can make up to 1,000 trips a day between them to bring back enough food.

Rotten parents

Cuckoos don't look after their chicks. Instead, the female lays her egg in another bird's nest. When it hatches, the chick kicks out the other eggs.

Wren

The cuckoo chick is fed by the adopted parents, and is often bigger than they are.
