

Songbird parents feed their chicks until they are 10–15 days old.

Bird songs

Each species of songbird has its own special song, using different notes and rhythms. Most of the singing is performed by males.

Dawn chorus

In Europe and North America, male songbirds sing loudly at dawn to attract females. Somehow, the females can hear and identify the correct tune among the many melodies.

Safety in flocks

Many songbirds live in groups, called flocks. They collect food together and join forces to fight off bigger birds that might eat them.

Many songbirds are small and compact, with short beaks.

Dunnock

weird or what?

The Australian lyrebird can not only imitate other birds' songs but also other sounds it hears in the rainforest, such as chainsaws and even camera clicks!