

Cunning

Snakes creep up on their victims then lunge at them incredibly quickly. They kill larger victims before they eat them, either by injecting venom or crushing them.

Green cat snake

Many snakes are well camouflaged against their background, which makes it easier for them to stalk victims.

Snakes can eat so much in one meal that they don't have to feed for weeks.

Eating habits

Snakes eat pretty much anything that moves, from ants and snails to goats and crocodiles. The egg-eating snake can swallow eggs bigger than its head! It then squeezes the insides out and vomits up the shell.

Egg-eating snake

The snake's jaws are elastic and stretch wide to allow it to eat big animals.

The egg is squashed by muscles inside the snake's body.

A tight squeeze

Constrictors, such as this anaconda, wrap themselves around their victims and squeeze them until they can't breathe. This snake will eat this large alligator whole!

Turn and learn

How lizards defend themselves against enemies:
pp. 88-89