

Creating a customer profile

By constructing a profile of an existing customer using data from within the company, marketers have a clearer view of the buying patterns and habits of an individual. They can then make projections about the long-term value of that individual as a customer.

Customer profile